About the Author: John Doe is an emergency physician who spent two decades in hospital emergency rooms before realizing that he wanted something more intellectually fulfilling than resuscitating people. After a successful career as a mental health therapist and an eclectic one as a freelance writer and editor, he put his experience to work building this blog. He is also the author of The Well-Rounded Emergency Physician: A Guidebook to the Cognitive Skills of Medical Practice (Oxford University Press, 2015).

The last two posts about this article: I'm pretty excited about this. I was wondering how to find best deals from Amazon from the web interface! I found a bookmarklet called Amazon Assistant which works nicely for looking at books. I really love using Google Reader to read the blogs I follow, but it's getting harder to search for items there because of the lack of a decent way to filter by type of item. Using the Feedburner Bookmarklet solves this problem nicely. I can't wait for this! I'm very disappointed in their cancellation policy, though. Looks like you have to cancel your account via email or phone?! Not very customer friendly. Did anyone here find it useful? I couldn't find any information on how well it worked, and it is a bit pricey compared to some other options. :-)
